Graphics Intern - Yogi Times Lifestyle Media Group

Yogi Times is looking for graphic design interns to work with our experienced Los Angeles-based art department. Yogi Times internships are unpaid but structured to give interns maximum exposure to lifestyle, print and online visual communication strategy with our intention being to provide interns with solid experience that will eventually help them find paid work for their talents.

Ideal candidates have a passion for the graphic design world, strive to make a difference, be of service, and are passionate about uncovering inspiration and knowledge relevant to the LOHAS (Lifestyles of Health and Sustainability) sector. An interest and knowledge of yoga, holistic living, environmental issues and socially responsible business is a plus.

Interns assist the art department with tasks ranging from administrative to supremely creative. Interns enjoy the opportunity to attend concept meetings for editorial content, fashion shoots, and art related reviews. Interns also play an integral part in the production of all publications, collateral and marketing campaigns. This is an excellent way to obtain graphic design credits and build a solid design portfolio. Successful internships often lead to future employment with the company.

Responsibilities may include but are not limited to:

- General office assistance
- Photo selection
- Production of collateral and internal documents
- Product scouting
- Data organization
- Assistance concepting spreads and web content
- Assist in coordination of monthly fashion shoots
- Special projects, as needed

Qualifications and Expectations:

- Minimum commitment of 16 hours per week in the Yogi Times Los Angeles office (located in Culver City)
- Excellent concept, typography and photo correction skills
- Excellent interpersonal skills
- Excellent organizational skills
- Independent work style requiring minimal supervision
- Proficiency in Adobe Photoshop, In Design, Image Ready and Illustrator. (Adobe GoLive a plus but not required)
